

A very special house guest

A delighted Princess Anne visits Marcon Place, near Hackney Downs station, a new development of 28 one-bedroom 'starter homes'

PRINCESS Anne enjoyed a peek inside a 'starter home' during a tour around a new development in Hackney.

Her Royal Highness visited Marcon Place, near Hackney Downs station, to learn more about London's growing housing crisis and new ideas to tackle the problem. She talked to first time buyers who had previously found themselves priced out of the housing market but were ineligible for social housing. The 28 one-bedroom apartments are designed for Londoners on a moderate income. For more info and pics, see page 3.

LONDON WHEELS

HACKNEY is set to trial one of the largest and most progressive traffic schemes of its kind in the capital, which will create a car free area in the borough.

Sixteen residential junctions around London Fields will be closed to motor vehicle through traffic in a bid to end 'rat-running' and improve conditions for pedestrians and cyclists.

The project, due to begin in January, will use large planters filled with flowers, shrubs and trees, to act as a filter system for traffic and bring bursts of greenery to the roads.

They will be installed between Richmond Road in the north and Scriven Road in the south, and Lansdowne Drive in the east and Haggerston Road in the west, affecting an area of roughly one square kilometre.

Residents will still be able to drive into the area, which, according to the latest census data, has some of the highest cycling rates in Hackney, particularly for commuting to work by bike.

The proposals are likely to reduce the high volumes of non-local motor traffic currently using these residential streets, with the aim of making the neighbourhoods quieter and less polluted places to live, as well as safer and more pleasant places to walk, cycle and play.

Nearly 40 per cent of all trips made in Hackney are by foot.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: "This exciting project will bring significant improvements for almost everyone living in the area. In Hackney, walking and cycling come first and we are committed to doing everything we can to make the borough a better place for these activities."

The Zero Emissions Network (ZEN) has been helping businesses work more cleanly and cheaply for a year now

Feel zen, go green

A 700-strong business network set up to create healthier and less polluting workforces in and around Shoreditch celebrated its first birthday last month.

The Zero Emissions Network (ZEN) – a free, award-winning tri-borough enterprise by Hackney, Islington and Tower Hamlets councils – has helped businesses implement hundreds of greener measures since coming together last October.

Cars and vans have been replaced by electric vehicles, electric taxi-use and cargo bikes; and grants have been used to create walking and cycle-friendly workplaces. Other ways in which ZEN is helping businesses work more cleanly and cheaply, include: reduced rate car club memberships; energy-use action plans; and cycling seminars, maintenance courses and repair sessions –

We care about the air we breathe, polluted air affects our lungs

The Zero Emissions Network (ZEN) celebrates its first birthday

all for free.

Teresa Goncalves, Campaigns Officer at the British Lung Foundation (BLF), which has an office in Goswell Road, said:

"We care about the air we breathe, polluted air affects our lungs and the BLF are campaigning to clean it up. Since becoming a ZEN member we've switched to using electric taxis for our journeys. Not only does this mean we can order taxis without contributing to air pollution, but ZEN also negotiated a discount with e-Connect cars which means we save 10 per cent on each booking."

Members of the network came together at The Trampery, in Shoreditch, to celebrate ZEN: One Year On, which saw talks from the ZEN team, Forster Communications, the Bamboo Bicycle Club, and Cllr Claudia Webbe, Islington Council's Executive Member for Environment and Transport.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: "A year after we came together to try and tackle pollution in the Shoreditch area, we can now see some tangible effects, with hundreds of businesses working more cleanly and efficiently and many more workers enjoying a healthier lifestyle."

Fit for royalty

Princess Anne meets resident Mike Tsang at Marcon Place, a new development of starter homes, near Hackney Downs station

THEY might not be palaces, but a new development of starter homes in Hackney proved themselves fit for royalty when Princess Anne visited on 27 October.

Her Royal Highness toured Marcon Place, near Hackney Downs station, to learn more about London's growing housing crisis and new ideas to tackle it.

She spent the morning talking to first time buyers who had previously found themselves priced out of the property market but ineligible for social housing.

Cllr Philip Glanville, who joined the Princess on the tour, said: "These new homes at Marcon Place show the range of different home ownership options we work on together with partners. We need more homes of all tenures to keep Hackney a borough where people of all backgrounds can continue to live and

Georgie Lister-Fell chats to Princess Anne and Marc Vlessing, Chief Executive of Pocket, which built the 28 one-bedroom apartments work together."

The 28 one-bedroom apartments at Marcon Place, built by Pocket property developers, are designed for Londoners on a moderate income and are sold at 30 per cent less than the local market rate. Subsequent buyers will also need to meet the same eligibility criteria so that the homes remain affordable.

Pocket Chief Executive, Marc Vlessing, said: "We were honoured that Her Royal Highness chose to pay a visit to one of our affordable developments.

"We are planning a second development in Hackney for next year, which will help more local people into housing."

News in brief

Remembrance Sunday parade will pay tribute to the fallen

A PROCESSION from Hackney Town Hall to the War Memorial at St John-at-Hackney Church and back will be held on 8 November to honour all those who have died serving their country.

The public are invited to gather at the Town Hall on Mare Street at 9.45am. The parade, accompanied by a band, will then progress to St John's, where wreaths will be laid and faith leaders will address the assembled crowd. There will be a minute's silence at 11am before a Service of Remembrance. At 12.30pm, the parade will head back to the Town Hall, accompanied by the Royal British Legion with other veterans, representatives of the Armed Forces Reserves, Cadets, Scouts, Guides, St John Ambulance, British Red Cross, police and fire brigade. Finally, at 12.40pm, the parade will come to a halt outside the Town Hall to take a salute from the Speaker of Hackney. Residents are invited to join and support the parade to remember all those who have given their lives.

Community joins forces to clean up streets and tackle anti-social behaviour

Youngsters gather around a stall at the Clean Up Clapton Day

CLAPTON residents rolled up their sleeves and donned their rubber gloves on 22 October for the annual Clean Up Clapton Day, which saw schoolchildren, voluntary groups, councillors and police working side by side to clear up the streets and reduce anti-social behaviour.

At the event, which was the largest and most popular yet, stalls were erected to give out information about recycling. A number of anti-knife and anti-gun stands, staffed by police from Hackney Downs, also provided information and advice in the aftermath of the recent shooting on Chatsworth Road.

Also represented at the event was Community Payback, a scheme in which offenders 'pay the community back' for their crimes with unpaid work. Staff explained their job to residents and local students, and committed to clearing overgrown foliage around disused toilets in Upper Clapton.

Sporting Hackney FC, the borough's leading football team, also had a stall and pavements were jet cleaned by the commercial waste team from the Council's Millfields Road Depot.

Pupils from Millfields and Al-Falah primary schools also went litter picking and took part in a painting competition due to be judged by The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sade Etti.

Images of children from the hard-hitting NSPCC campaign encouraging residents to help tackle child exploitation

Watch out for abuse

ACAMPAIGN has been launched in the borough to help tackle child exploitation.

The Council and the City and Hackney Safeguarding Children Board have joined forces with the charity NSPCC to encourage residents to look out for the signs that a young person is being exploited and to report their concerns.

A poster and leaflet details some of the signals that a child might be a victim of sexual exploitation, or is being targeted by gangs or extremists.

Anyone worried about a young person can phone a

“Welfare of children and young people is our priority, but unfortunately there are some people who seek to exploit them” dedicated NSPCC helpline or, if they prefer, e-mail the NSPCC for advice. The free phone line, which can be called anonymously, is open 24 hours a day, with specialists on hand to discuss concerns.

The potential signs of exploitation highlighted in the campaign include: ‘I don’t know how they’re affording all these new things’; ‘I don’t understand why they’ve got a second mobile phone’; and ‘They’ve been going missing overnight and skipping school – I don’t know where they go.’

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children’s Services, said: “The welfare of children and young people is our absolute priority, but unfortunately there are some people who seek to exploit them.

“There are lots of reasons why a child or young person might start acting differently, but a change in behaviour could be a sign that they’re at risk. By working in partnership with the NSPCC, we’re opening up another way for people to get advice and report anything they’re concerned about. Together we can all play a part in keeping young people safe.”

Consultation on new safe street zone in London Fields

The three-month road traffic trial in London Fields will act as a formal consultation process in which residents can give their views.

The Council will also be accepting feedback and honing designs during the works’ notification period, starting in mid-November, as well as throughout the trial. Details on how, when and where residents will be able to contribute to the process are being finalised and will be included in scheme publicity in the coming months.

News in brief

Grab last tickets for fireworks

RESIDENTS can still get tickets for this year’s Hackney Fireworks Show on Saturday, 7 November. The event, set to be a stunning spectacle of pyrotechnics synchronised to music, is back at Clissold Park, Stoke Newington, for the second year running. The theme, chosen by residents, is ‘superheroes’, so dress to impress as your favourite character. The family-friendly event will also feature a children’s funfair, street performers, and food and drink stalls. Tickets for the show cost £7.50 for adults and £2.50 for children who live in the borough; and £8.50 and £3.50 respectively for non-residents. Gates open at 6pm and the display starts at 7.30pm. Tickets are available at the Hackney Empire box office until noon on 6 November, or until sold out. Go in person to the theatre in Mare Street; visit online: www.hackneyempire.co.uk; or call: 020 8985 2424. Tributes paid to foster carer TRIBUTES are being paid to foster carer Audrey Saunders, who died aged 66. She had looked after vulnerable children in the borough for 17 years. The loving mother, grandmother and great-grandmother passed away on 14 October, and was remembered at a funeral service at the City of London cemetery on 29 October.

Audrey took the decision to foster when her son and daughters moved out of their home in Millfields Road. Daughter Toni paid tribute to her dedication to fostering. She said: “For mummy, nothing was a challenge, she just knew how to do it. Her kind calmness meant that she was a natural foster carer, she loved seeing all the kids move onto a permanent home where they could do well in life.”

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children’s Services, added: “Audrey was a positive, dedicated and committed foster carer who made a huge difference to the children she cared for.”

Audrey leaves behind birth children Francesca, Dionne, Toni, Junior and Sarah-Louise; 10 grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; as well as the 32 children she fostered.

Kynaston Gardens is home to the rare and beautiful Davidia involucrata – the handkerchief tree

A precious plot of greenery

ONCE known as the 'holy grail' of botany, there is a tree so rare and beautiful that, when it flowers at Kew Gardens in May, thousands of visitors flock to see it.

Incredibly, there's also one growing in Kynaston Gardens – a tiny, once-forgotten patch of land, off a Stoke Newington side street.

The exotic specimen is the Davidia involucrata, or the handkerchief tree, so called because when its large white blooms are disturbed by the breeze they give the impression of fluttering silk.

Matthew Dillon, secretary and founding member of the Friends of Kynaston Gardens, doesn't know how the China native, coveted by leading 19th and 20th century botanists, came to sprout in a green patch off Kynaston Avenue – a passage linking Stoke Newington High Street and Dynevor Road – but the enigma is indicative of the mystery of the gardens itself.

"A neighbour has photos showing houses that used to be situated in Kynaston Avenue," said the 37-year-old economist.

Adding: "There is a local myth that the houses were hit by a bomb in the Blitz but, perhaps a more likely theory is that the houses survived the war intact and were demolished as part of slum clearances and the gardens created in their place."

“The gardens are now a well-loved asset for all of the community”

During the 1970s and '80s, the little park was used as both a play area for local children and as a rose garden but, somewhere along the way, the land became less and less frequented, its condition deteriorated and eventually it began to fall foul of frequent anti-social behaviour.

By 2010, the community

Maya and Lauren Buttle on the climbing frame had had enough. A small band of nature lovers sat down and decided to form the 'Friends' group, and take back the precious plot of greenery in the otherwise densely-populated neighbourhood.

Over two years, from 2013, the Friends worked with the Council and charity Groundwork to secure £84,000 in funding, to renovate the gardens.

Now, the fruits of that labour are plain to see: the new design includes food plots for local people and schools, wild flowers to improve biodiversity, and a new children's play area.

"The gardens are now a well-loved asset for all the community," said Matthew, of Dynevor

Road. Today, the Friends group works with the community and the Council – which helps by providing resources through its parks department and acting as custodian of some of the grants – to ensure the gardens remain a green haven amid the busy bustle of urban Hackney life.

The question now is, can they make the handkerchief tree bloom?

HOW MANY PLACES DO WE NEED?

By 2020, Hackney will need an extra:

- 1,260 primary school places – equivalent to three new schools
- 1,650 secondary school places – equivalent to two new schools

The new Stoke Newington School and Sixth Form building

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE SO FAR?

Since 2004, Hackney has:

- Built three new primary schools
- Expanded and refurbished a further eight primary schools
- Opened seven new academies
- Four new free schools opened

The plans include expanding The Urswick School in Hackney Central

A place for all

With an increasing population putting pressure on schools, plans are underway to create nearly 3,000 extra places for students across the borough

PLANS are underway to create nearly 3,000 extra school places across the borough to make sure children can attend a local school.

Over the last decade, Hackney has benefited from one of the biggest and most ambitious schools building and regeneration programmes in the country, with nearly half a billion pounds invested in creating new primary schools and academies, as well as the refurbishing and re-building all of the borough's secondary schools. However, like most London boroughs, Hackney is feeling the impact of an increasing population on its schools.

“Our schools have gone on a remarkable journey over the last 13 years”

By 2020, the borough needs to create an extra 1,260 primary school places and – following the withdrawal of Department for Education approval for Hackney Wick Free School – 1,650 secondary school places.

Options to fund them – and land to build on – are extremely limited. The Council is less able to rely on government grants, leaving a funding gap of over £40million. To overcome this, the Council is looking at options which could see housing developed alongside new school places. This would allow profit from the sale of homes to directly fund new schools, as well as rebuilding and expanding existing schools. Profit would also contribute towards the Council's ambitious house building programme, which will see 3,000 new homes built in the borough over the next four years, half of which will be for social rent and shared ownership.

The re-opening of the new Thomas Fairchild Community School, in Hoxton, in January 2013

PLANS TO INCREASE THE NUMBER OF SCHOOL PLACES INCLUDE EXPANDING:

- Harrington Hill primary on its existing E5 site
- Orchard primary on its existing E9 site
- Sir Thomas Abney primary on its existing N16 site
- Urswick secondary on its existing E9 site
- Hackney is in the early stages of planning another secondary school, following the withdrawal of Government approval for Hackney Wick Free School

The Petchey Academy, E8

Pupils play cricket at The City Academy, Hackney

An artist's impression of the proposed new Nightingale Primary School building next to Hackney Downs, which includes residential flats

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "We are proud that at secondary school level, over 83 percent of local families choose and get offered a place within the borough. That's not always been the case – in 2002, 40 percent travelled to a school outside Hackney, and without these extra places, pupils may again have to travel a significant distance to go to school."

"Our schools have gone on a remarkable journey over the last 13 years, and we want to make sure that as many children as possible benefit from this. At the moment, 99 percent of children attend a good or outstanding secondary school, and 92 percent are at a good or outstanding primary. Our aim is for that figure to reach 100 percent, and investing in our schools is crucial to us achieving that."

- Building a new secondary school on the site of Benthal Primary School, N16
- Building a new alternative education unit on the site of the former New Regents College, in Nile Street, N1

Mechanic Errol McKellar, who runs a garage in Hackney, helps save lives by offering discounts to customers who get checked for prostate cancer

By Harriet Worsley

START every day by saying 'good morning' to the people who pass," says Errol McKellar, as he describes his routine at the garage in Cremer Street, E2, which he has owned and run for 26 years.

Adding: "Because we have good days and we have bad ones. But on those bad days, well, at least you're alive. Anything can happen, as long as you're alive."

Errol has good reason to understand this more than most. In 2010, his wife made an appointment for him to visit his GP about his snoring.

He says: "I was sitting in the reception when I saw a flyer about prostate cancer. The receptionist said a test would only take 10 minutes, and I could do it there and then, so I did. I had no idea those 10 minutes would change my life forever."

A week later, he was called in for more blood tests, then a biopsy, then a scan. Errol continues: "Then the doctor sat me down and said 'Mr McKellar, your prostate is covered in cancer'."

With his wife, Sharon, beside him, Errol was told the prostate would have to be removed, or he might not survive the next six months.

"There was an operation. Then radiation therapy, then five years of seeing a doctor every month," he explains.

Errol was finally given the 'all-clear' last year but, he says, 'it was in 2012 that I started to feel I needed to do something about prostate cancer awareness. I just couldn't think of how'.

A man came into the garage soon after and, while discussing a problem with his gearbox, Errol asked if he had had his prostate checked.

"He was a bit taken aback!" laughs Errol. But

“In this little garage in Hackney... 35 men have said they were diagnosed with prostate cancer” the mechanic offered him a 20 per cent discount if he took a test and a week later, the man returned.

"He was waving his results," says Errol. Adding: "They showed that he had early stage cancer. He said that if we hadn't spoken, he never would have been checked. Like me, he hadn't had any symptoms. He said he didn't want the 20 per cent discount, but to donate it to charity instead."

Thus, Errol's awareness campaign was born. Every man who comes into the garage is offered a discount if they get checked for prostate cancer, a disease which affects one in eight men in the UK and kills 10,000 a year.

Treatment is most effective if diagnosis is early.

Curriculum Vitae: Errol McKellar

- 1957 Born in Brent
- 1989 Buys a garage in Hackney
- 2010 Diagnosed with aggressive prostate cancer
- 2012 Starts to offer discounts to men who get checked for cancer
- 2012 Carries the Olympic torch through Hackney
- 2015 Organises a celebrity charity football match featuring Russell Brand and Harry Redknapp

But, says Errol: "Generally, men are too macho to talk about these things. I asked 100 women who came into the garage whether they had been to the doctor in the last year. Eighty-nine had. I asked the same number of men, and do you know how many had been? One. Just one. That's shocking."

Errol continues: "In this little garage in Hackney, in just the two-and-a-half years I've been doing this, 35 men have come back to me and said they were diagnosed with prostate cancer after I asked them to get checked. And there could be more; men who were too shocked, or embarrassed, to talk about it."

Of those 35 men, 20 were Afro-Caribbean. Errol wants to spread the word that black men, as well as those over 50 or with a family history, are at greater risk.

Errol continues quietly: "Two of the men diagnosed after coming into the garage are no longer with us. And they were men with their futures ahead of them. It's such a tragedy."

Errol has raised over £20,000 for Prostate Cancer UK since 2012. Chosen by the local community, he carried the Olympic torch through Hackney, cheered on by 20,000 people.

Earlier this year, he organised a charity football game at Leyton Orient football club, and persuaded Thierry Henry, Russell Brand, Harry Redknapp and Bradley Walsh among many other celebrities to join in promoting the cause.

"But I couldn't have done any of it without the Hackney community. It's the best. You couldn't dream up a more incredible support network. I'm so, so lucky," he says.

News in brief

Help keep Hackney beautiful

THE 'Beautiful Boroughs Project' is looking for residents to form groups to keep Hackney free of litter. Supported by CleanupUK, a charity dedicated to tackling the problem of litter and fly tipping across the country, the project helps residents look after their environment by holding local clear-ups. The aim is that these events become regular resident-organised meetings, with CleanupUK supplying all the contacts and equipment that people need to help make their group a success. To start a group, or for more information, visit: www.cleanupuk.org.uk; call Sarah Hayes on: 07469 660 842; or e-mail: sarah.hayes@cleanupuk.org.uk

Planting overground

DALSTON Kingsland station has begun its own journey towards becoming a community growing space as part of a new project called the Energy Garden.

Planting began at the Hackney station on 8 October, and the event helped launch a scheme that aims to create gardens and growing spaces in and around London Overground stations over the next two years.

The project has won a grant of £750,000 from the People's Postcode Lottery's Dream Fund, to promote community gardening, food

“By developing an Energy Garden Network across the Overground stations we will help connect people with their environment” growing, and solar energy usage to power lighting, water pumps or other small scale amenities.

It will also deliver workshops for schools on renewable energy, urban food growing, and rail safety. There are also plans to identify larger solar energy sites that will generate long term income.

Agamemnon Otero, Energy Garden founder and CEO of Repowering London, said: "Energy Garden will engage local communities in reclaiming spaces within London Overground stations and create highly visible, accessible growing hubs that will involve people of all ages in the cultivation and maintenance of plants, medicinal herbs, vegetables and even hops.

"By developing an Energy

Garden network we will help connect people with their environment, nature and also introduce them to local food growing."

The Energy Garden partnership – Repowering London, Groundwork London, and Transport for London – wants community groups, commuters, station staff, residents and businesses to share their ideas for other stations.

Local shops encouraged to sign up to the 5p plastic bag charge

SINCE the start of October, the law has required large shops in England to charge 5p for all single-use plastic carrier bags.

The Council has also invited small shops (which are currently exempt from the plastic bag charge legislation) to pledge not to offer them to customers unless they specifically ask for one. Many independent shops in the borough are also choosing to charge 5p and donate the proceeds to good causes, and others are handing out 'I Love Hackney' reusable bags to customers.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Hackney Council started this campaign to encourage local businesses to help us reduce the number of plastic bags that end up littered on our streets.

"Plastic bags can take up to 1,000 years to degrade ... and residents have told us that they appreciate local businesses doing their bit to help reduce waste."

For a full list of the shops which have signed up, visit: news.hackney.gov.uk/plastic-bags/

To sign up, Hackney shops should send an e-mail to: recycling.team@hackney.gov.uk, including the business name and address. They will then be sent a free pack, including stickers and posters to promote the campaign.

THE Royal African Society's annual film festival is back this month for its fifth year, with 15 visiting film-makers and screenings of 60 titles from 27 different African countries, some of the best coming to Hackney Picturehouse.

Film Africa 2015 includes a dizzying range of features, documentaries and short films covering subjects as diverse as migration, civil war and LGBTI rights. Hackney's celebrations kick off with 'Adama', on 31 October. The animation, directed by Simon Rouby and with a 12-year-old West African boy as its hero, won the Work in Progress competition at France's prestigious Annecy Animation Film Festival in 2014.

Other highlights include the documentary

'Red Leaves', on 1 November, which includes a live Q&A with its director Bazi Gete. Idris Elba's personal tribute to both his father and Nelson Mandela, entitled 'Mandela, My Dad, and Me', is screened on 2 November, while 'Hope', the next night, is followed by a panel discussion about the film's themes of migration, human rights abuses, and economic instability. Moroccan and French film 'The Sea Is Behind' gets its UK premiere on 4 November, while Puccini's classic opera La Boheme is updated to contemporary Cape Town in 'Breathe Umphefumlo', showing on 6 November.

A dream start

Students at The City Academy, Hackney take part in a workshop of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' as part of the Dare to Play! project

MORE than 600 Hackney students performed scenes from Shakespeare's 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' as part of a ground-breaking education project run by the Globe Theatre.

Dare to Play!, a Hackney-based project, aims to ease the transition from primary to secondary school, a move that research shows can be stressful for children.

Through rehearsing and performing a Shakespeare play, the programme teaches students how to work collaboratively and prepare them emotionally for secondary school.

Over the summer, pupils in their final year at Millfields, Whitmore and De Beauvoir primary

“ Parents and students are overwhelmingly positive about the project ”

Pieter Lawman, Globe Education Practitioner, leads the workshop schools took part in workshops with the Globe. This term, specially trained staff from the theatre's education department, Globe Education, have been running workshops at Stoke Newington, Haggerston and City Academy secondary schools.

Juliet Cook, Head of English at Stoke Newington School, said: "Parents and students are overwhelmingly positive about the project. Parents are excited by the chance to see their child take part confidently in a school production so early into their time with us and students start their secondary school experience seeing English as a fun and accessible subject."

The programme, which the Globe now aims to roll out across other London boroughs, culminated in performances held at The City Academy, Hackney on 20 October and Stoke Newington School on 23 October.

News in brief

College hailed as 'excellent'

OFSTED has published its first report since the introduction of a new national framework for assessing further education centres and pronounced a Hackney college 'good' with 'outstanding' features.

Hackney Community College underwent a week-long inspection in October during which Ofsted closely studied its environment and facilities, the behaviour and outcomes of its students, and the support they receive for further study and employment.

On 26 October, the inspection board published its findings, concluding that 'the college is a key partner for the London Borough of Hackney, working at both strategic and operational level to improve opportunities for learners and employers'.

The report praised the college's high standards of behaviour and work, as well as its 'excellent learning environment' and 'outstanding partnerships' that prepare students for the working world.

College Principal, Ian Ashman, said: "I am delighted that Hackney Community College, a significant player in Hackney and the wider East London region, has been recognised so positively."

School tests out arts scheme

STOKE Newington School is one of 100 across the country to have tested a nationwide arts programme.

The revamped Artsmark Award, run by the Arts Council and piloted in schools over the summer term, aims to ensure more children have access to arts and culture.

Annie Gammon, Head of Stoke Newington School, said: "Artsmark has had a huge influence on the ethos of our school. The award in itself instils great pride in all that we achieve in the arts."

"It has become an important symbol of our ambition to be an inclusive, creative, community school."

Ceremony praises residents who have been working hard to improve their English

Cllr Sade Etti with residents who have completed their ESOL course

THE Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sade Etti, joined a celebration for 140 residents who recently completed an ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) course.

The free courses are provided by the Council's adult learning services team and are held at 30 venues across the borough, including children's centres, schools and libraries. They offer the chance for adults to improve their English, helping them to become more independent and involved in their community.

Cllr Etti met the learners and presented them with certificates at a ceremony at Hackney Empire, on 21 October. She said: "It was wonderful to meet so many Hackney residents who are seizing the opportunity to improve their language skills."

For information on joining an ESOL course, call: 020 8820 7043; or e-mail: esol@learningtrust.co.uk

The pre-apprenticeship course gives young people from Hackney the opportunity to pick up practical trade skills

Trade up your skills

YOUNG people from Hackney have been given trade skills for life thanks to a free, on-site apprenticeship construction course funded by the Council.

Joining with apprenticeship training agency K-10, and supported by Berkeley Homes, the pre-apprenticeship training course has seen more than 30 young people learn construction skills in preparation for future careers in the industry.

The course, which has run throughout the year, has given participants experience by providing a range of opportunities to work on the Council's Woodberry Down regeneration scheme, which is building more than 5,500 new homes in the area.

Beginning in the classroom, they were taught the fundamentals of working on a construction site with a month of intensive training, learning health and safety regulations, and the skills needed across trade disciplines, while also brushing up on maths and English.

“I learnt the skills from professional plumbers of how to use the tools properly”

After completing the first stage of the training to get the necessary qualification to work on a construction site, they were given the chance to choose which trade to specialise in from the many available, including electrician, plumber, plasterer, carpenter or kitchen fitter.

Matched with an on-site contractor, budding construction workers were then given two weeks to show their skills in their chosen trade, while picking up practical experience working on a large-scale development.

The contractor was able to choose to hire the young person to become a qualified apprentice working full time on the Woodberry Down development, or the many other construction opportunities in a growing borough.

Plumbing apprentice Arjun, 18, said: “The course was a great experience. I learnt the skills from professional plumbers on how to use the tools properly while being shown the work involved. No day was ever the same.”

A Berkeley Homes spokesperson said: “We believe in training people looking for work who want to join our wonderful industry, participants from the programme are already working on our sites.”

US ambassador reaches out

By Dila Tumer

AN ENTHUSIASTIC group of East London students met the US ambassador to the UK, as part of a 'speaking tour' across London.

The event, on 26 October, was organised by Hackney-based mentoring charity ReachOut and marked the 100th talk that Matthew Barzun had given in the capital. Hundreds of young people were welcomed to the Bloomberg building in the City, with students from Haggerston School representing Hackney at the event. Ambassador Barzun kicked off by revealing President Obama advised him that he would only become a successful ambassador if he took the time to 'listen'. This had inspired him to meet with as many young people as he could in the UK in order to listen to their concerns and views about the USA.

He concluded the event by emphasising that young people were the future leaders of the UK and encouraging them to seize every opportunity they get to make the world a greater place.

Cash in with Dazed fashion

By Dila Tumer

HACKNEY Community College staff and students are celebrating after receiving over £5,000 raised from an event organised by online retail giant Amazon.

The money came from ticket sales for the Dazed Fashion Forum, a collaboration between Amazon Fashion and Dazed & Confused magazine, held in Hoxton, in July. The cash will go towards helping the college nurture the fashion talent of the future.

Juliet Warkentin, Amazon Fashion EU, presented a cheque for £5,250 to the college principal Ian Ashman. Dazed Fashion Forum featured a series of workshops and lectures that allowed young people to meet leading figures in fashion, aiming to break down barriers and give participants a taste of life in the industry.

Guests heard from current and former editors, creative directors and artists, as well as watching a photo shoot by world-famous British photographer Rankin.

Jefferson Hack, who spoke at the event, said: "Dazed Fashion Forum is about leftfield thinkers, sharing radical ideas, opening up new possibilities and showing how youth can break into the industry."

Associate Lay Member for Governance

We want to recruit a new independent Associate Lay Member to help us to ensure that we are fulfilling all of our responsibilities to the people of City and Hackney and that we are always acting with the highest standards of integrity and transparency.

We are very conscious that we are the custodians of significant amount of public money and that we need always to keep the trust of the local people to whom we are accountable.

An important part of the role involves participation in two important committees of the Governing Body:

The Audit Committee ensures that we always adhere to our governance framework, deliver our statutory responsibilities, work transparently and manage any actual or potential conflicts of interest effectively.

The Finance & Performance Committee provides oversight and scrutiny of our financial performance and the delivery of their financial and performance objectives by our Programme Boards.

We are looking for someone who has:

- Roots in our local communities and a keen interest in the health and wellbeing of the people of City and Hackney.
- A good understanding of the local health and social care system and some understanding of how the NHS and the wider health and social care system works nationally.
- The skills and experience needed to scrutinise and challenge governance and complex financial matters through membership of a CCAB Body.
- Experience gained in a governance environment within a public body, charitable organisation or commercial firm.
- Can commit to working flexibly, committing to the required meetings and preparation

Typically the post will need you to commit about three half days each month. You will need to be able to work flexibly and commit to attend committee meetings and to undertake the associated preparatory work. The pay for this role is currently £10,800 a year paid on a monthly basis.

If you think you might be the right person to take on this position and would like to have an informal discussion about the role, please contact Philippa Lowe, CCG Chief Finance Officer at Philippa.lowe@nhs.net

If you would like to apply for the vacancy, please request a pack from the following address chccgrecruitment@nhs.net or download at www.cityandhackneyccg.nhs.uk

Fighting fit

Better Club 50+ is providing dedicated and specialised classes and activities – such as aqua aerobics (above) – for those aged 50 and over

A NEW fitness club for the borough's older residents has opened at Britannia Leisure Centre to coincide with International Older Person's Day.

Better Club 50+, run by the Council's leisure provider GLL, is providing dedicated and specialised classes and activities for those aged 50 and over.

The club launched last month with a day of free taster sessions – including African dance, badminton, yoga and chair-based exercise – at the centre in Hyde Road, Hoxton, on 1 October.

Around 80 people took part in the taster

“What better way to celebrate older people than by opening a dedicated hub for them in the borough?”

day, which also included sessions run by community campaigners Gaby's Kitchen, who work to educate residents about healthy eating.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “What better way to celebrate older people than by opening a dedicated hub for them in the borough?

“We want to make accessing sport later in life easier, not harder, which is why we've set up this club, offering activities at specially-reduced prices.”

A Better 'Pay and Play Membership' costs £1.85 a day and allows members to take part in all the activities taking place on that day.

As well as sport, Better Club 50+ groups hold social events like Christmas meals and fruit-picking, and group trips to museums and picnics.

Participants also get the opportunity to represent Hackney in the Annual Better Club Games, which involves more than 700 older people competing in eight different sports at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

Sessions will run at the Britannia Leisure Centre every week on a Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Grants of up to £30,000 on offer for innovative projects to tackle major health issues

The Parent Club, Stoke Newington, one of this year's bid winners

LOCAL organisations could be awarded grants of up to £30,000 if they register their ideas for tackling big health issues.

Last year, The Healthier Hackney Fund supported 32 projects which are now being delivered across the borough. This year it has £250,000 to disperse between charities, voluntary groups and social enterprises with innovative ideas for addressing sexual health, substance misuse and obesity issues.

Healthy Neighbourhood grants can offer £1,000 to kickstart projects encouraging residents to help each other stay healthy. A research fund, Healthy Ideas, will award grants of £12,000 to develop and pilot programmes focused either on the wider causes of obesity, or on specific health problems within communities. Finally, Healthy Activities grants of up to £30,000 will support projects working in the field of sexual health and substance misuse.

Those hoping to apply must register their interest by 6 November. Once a shortlist of applicants has been drawn up, successful groups will need to pitch their project before a panel, and complete a fuller application form before final decisions are made.

Free flu vaccine programme

THE NHS has launched its biggest ever free flu vaccination programme, as it urges people to 'stay well this winter'. The flu vaccine has been extended to include school children in Years 1 and 2, who are now also eligible to get a free nasal spray vaccine, making the programme available to all children aged two to six-years-old. The adult flu vaccine is also offered to groups at particular risk, including pregnant women, those aged 65 and over, carers, and people with long-term health conditions. Dr Yvonne Doyle, London regional director for Public Health England, said: "Getting the vaccine is the best way to protect yourself and your loved ones from catching flu and I would urge everyone who is offered the vaccine free on the NHS to get vaccinated."

Call for black blood donors

WITH less than one per cent of blood donors coming from black or mixed race people, NHS Blood and Transplant is calling for more individuals from these communities to register as blood, organ and stem cell donors.

Ethnicity can play a big part in blood transfusions, stem cell transplants and organ transplants. Black donors are more likely to have rare blood and tissue types, and black patients are more likely to require these types.

Ian Trenholm, Chief Executive at NHS Blood and Transplant, said: "We really do need more black blood, organ and stem cell donors to help support black patients. If you've not thought about it before, then why not do so now."

Antiestablishmentarianism

By Emma Winch & Oisín Wall

THE Anti-University of London was an experiment in radical education. In 1968, Shoreditch was a working class area that had seen better days, many of the residents were moving away in search of work and decent housing.

Young bohemians began moving in to take advantage of the cheap rent. In the mid-1960s, the Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation bought a run-down building at 49 Rivington Street, now an upmarket boutique, and rented it to various counter-cultural organisations.

First, they rented it to the Vietnam Solidarity Committee, a mainly Marxist group that organised several huge marches against perceived British complicity in the Vietnam War. Later, in the spring of 1968, the building was handed over to the Anti-University of London.

Its faculty list was a veritable who's who of the counter-culture's strange ascendency: R D Laing, the then famous anti-psychiatrist; Alexander Trocchi, a 'junky revolutionary' and novelist; John Latham, a well-known artist who had lost his job at a university because he returned a library book dissolved in a test tube of acid; and almost 50 more. Some 300 students came to meet their heroes and gain insights into the nature of the world, life, and society.

The courses on offer ranged from the serious 'Sociology of Guerrilla Warfare', to the light-hearted 'Jeff Nuttall is Fat', and to the downright strange 'Dragons'. Some of these were run like normal classes where a teacher lectured the students, but most were more discussion groups. Here people talked, on equal terms, about everything from religion to the possibility of overthrowing the government.

The Anti-University operated in Rivington Street until autumn 1968. In August, the organisers held a meeting of all the faculty and staff and convinced them that it needed to be reorganised so it would be cheaper to attend and more democratically run. Although some may have believed this, in reality they had to leave Rivington Street because the Peace Foundation was complaining about their many unpaid bills. After a few months trying to survive by holding classes in pubs and flats, the Anti-University finally dissolved.

Although short-lived, many of the ideas behind the Anti-University are still important. Organisers believed that in school people acted out roles, and that these roles stopped them from engaging with each other in any genuine way.

Real education, they believed, needed to allow people to engage honestly with each other, rather than letting them hide behind roles such as the all-knowing teacher or the deferential, or troublesome, student.

The Anti-University opposed the commodification of education, where a degree is seen as something that is bought with school fees, and then basically traded to get a job.

Instead they believed that education is good in its own right and that everyone involved in it, including the teacher, learns from the lived-experience of the others in the room. Above all, they saw education as something created in the heat of the moment – when people converse.

In a collective experiment to revisit the Anti-University of East London, researcher Oisín Wall has been working with Hackney Museum, Open School East and other individuals, organisations and collectives to organise a weekend festival of events across the UK.

From 20 to 22 November Hackney will be the hub of the ANTIUNIVERSITY NOW! FESTIVAL. Local cafes, bookshops, museums and galleries will offer workshops, walks, talks and discussions that take inspiration from the original courses offered during the first term of the 1968 Anti-University, and the people that organised them. Many of the original faculty members still have a legacy in Hackney today, the cultural theorists Stuart Hall and CLR James for example, have both inspired events that will take place over the festival weekend.

Events at the ANTIUNIVERSITY NOW! FESTIVAL are open to all, but some must be booked in advance. For more info, or to book, visit: cargocollective.com/antiuniversity

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable, healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. Roasted carrot hummus is quick and easy to make. Carrots provide the highest source of carotenes of the most commonly consumed vegetables. Carotenes are antioxidants and are also converted into Vitamin A in the body. Evidence suggests that increased intake of antioxidant-rich fruits and vegetables reduces cancer and cardiovascular disease risks. Vitamin A is essential for vision, so what your mother said about eating carrots to help you see in the dark is actually true.

Roasted carrot hummus

Serves 4 on toast, or more to share as a dip

Preparation time

10 mins

Cooking time

30 mins

Ingredients

- 8 large carrots
- 1 tbsp of olive oil
- 1 red chilli or 1 tsp of chilli flakes
- 2 cloves of garlic
- Pinch of black pepper
- 1 tbsp of tahini paste
- Juice of half an orange (add more to taste)
- Juice of half a lemon (add more to taste)
- Handful of finely chopped coriander
- Bread, to serve
- Feta, crumbled (optional)
- Pomegranate seeds (optional)
- Balsamic vinegar (optional).

Method

- Heat the oven to 170C
- Peel and chop the carrots into 3cm chunks (not too small as you don't want them to burn). In a baking tray, toss in the olive oil, pepper, chilli and whole cloves of garlic (in skins)
- Bake in the oven for 30 minutes, stirring half way through, checking the carrots are not burning. Once baked, they should be soft so that a knife can easily pass through them
- Once the carrots are roasted, blend together with the tahini, orange, lemon and coriander, either in a jug with a stick blender, or in a food processor. Spoon the blended hummus into a bowl and serve with crusty bread or vegetable sticks
- For a dinner party, serve on sourdough toast, with crumbled feta and pomegranate seeds on top and a drizzling of balsamic vinegar (pictured).

Have your say on Hackney's parking plan for 2015-20

THE Council has extended the deadline for residents, businesses and visitors to have their say about reviewing its Parking and Enforcement Plan for 2015-20.

The plan helps the Council make parking-related decisions.

It aims to balance competing parking needs, such as those of disabled people, residents and local businesses. This helps to manage parking in the borough more fairly.

The proposals include: a review of parking priority according to need, with an emphasis on supporting people with disabilities, residents and businesses; changes to the implementation and review of parking zones; improvements to the management of skip/highway licences and external requests for changes to parking bay designs; changes to permits and visitor vouchers; greater clarity in enforcement measures; and the replacement of the companion badge with a free resident permit.

The Council also wants to hear about residents' parking experiences, whether positive or negative, to understand how current policies and processes are working.

To respond to this consultation – before 16 November – visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking; e-mail: consultation.parking@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 8877 to request a questionnaire.
